

Three are Elected to Board of Trustees

J. Stewart Bryan III of Richmond, Adele Chatfield-Taylor of New York, and B. Grady Durham of Denver have been elected members of the Board of Trustees of the Thomas Jefferson Foundation, Inc. Their four-year terms will begin Jan. 1, 2002.

Bryan is chairman, president, and chief executive officer of Richmond-based Media General, Inc., a publicly owned communications company situated primarily in the Southeast with interests in newspapers and other publications, television stations, interactive media, recycled newsprint, and information services. A graduate of the University of Virginia and a former U.S. Marine Corps officer, he also serves as president and publisher of the Richmond Times-Dispatch.

Chatfield-Taylor is president of the American Academy in Rome, a center for independent study and advanced research in the arts and humanities. A Virginia native who holds a master's degree from Columbia University, she has worked as a historic preservationist in New York and Washington since 1967. Among her professional positions, she has been executive director of the New York Landmarks Preservation Foundation and director of the National Endowment for the Arts' Design Arts Program.

Durham is the founder of Monticello Associates, an independent asset-management consulting firm based in Denver. A graduate of the University of Colorado, he previously held management positions with Kidder Peabody's Portfolio Review and Investment Management Evaluation Services, New England
