Levy Stewardship Recounted

A book recounting the compelling story of the family that owned and protected Thomas Jefferson’s home for nearly nine decades is the newest title in the Monticello Monograph Series.

_The Levy Family and Monticello, 1834–1923: Saving Thomas Jefferson’s House_ by Melvin I. Urofsky details the eventful Levy stewardship of Monticello, which began with its purchase by Commodore Uriah P. Levy eight years after Jefferson’s death. The story continues through the seizure of the house by the Confederacy during the Civil War, a lengthy ownership dispute, a period of “desolation and ruin,” the restoration efforts of Uriah’s nephew Jefferson Monroe Levy, numerous attempts to have the federal government take over the property, and the 1923 sale to the newly formed Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation.

Urofsky is professor of history and public policy at Virginia Commonwealth University. He is the author of _Louis D. Brandeis and the Progressive Tradition_ and _Felix Frankfurter: Judicial Restraint and Individual Liberties_, and has written or edited more than two dozen other books.

Urofsky delivered a talk on the Levy stewardship of Monticello at the International Center for Jefferson Studies on Oct. 2 and signed copies of his new book at the Madison Avenue Bookshop in New York City on Oct. 10.
Levy Book
CONTINUED, PAGE TWO

The Levy Family and Monticello was published through the generosity of the Honorable John Langeloth Loeb, Jr., former U.S. ambassador to Denmark. The book’s preface is by Michael Kammen, Newton C. Farr Professor of History and Culture at Cornell University.

The Levy Family and Monticello is available in both hardcover and paperback at the Monticello Museum Shops, while the paperback edition can be purchased online at www.monticello.org or by calling the Monticello Catalog at 800-243-1743 (refer to Item No. 011050).