

Monticello's Donors Advance Jeffersonian Legacy

The year 2001 ushered in a new millennium, a second decade of advancement at Monticello, and a renewed appreciation for the basic freedoms Thomas Jefferson helped secure for us more than two centuries ago.

A resurgence in patriotism and recognition of Jefferson as the architect of American democracy led to 241 first-time gifts, renewed support from old friends, and increased contributions from others.

Thanks to all 1,105 individuals, foundations, corporations, and organizations listed on these pages, the Thomas Jefferson Foundation in 2001 achieved an ambitious goal of $1.5 million in its annual fund for direct support of the mission of preservation and education and finished the year with $10.9 million in total gift income – the second highest gift total in the Foundation's 79-year history.

These gifts have made possible tremendous enhancements in the Foundation's educational offerings, which now reach a worldwide audience, and in its stewardship of the Monticello house and plantation.

Our goal remains excellence. The Foundation thanks all donors for their interest and their generosity, and pledges to continue to further the core mission and advance the Jeffersonian legacy during these unsettled times.
