Donors advance Jefferson legacies

DONORS to the Thomas Jefferson Foundation are stewards not only of Monticello, the iconic three-dimensional autobiography of Thomas Jefferson and the only house in America on the United Nations’ World Heritage list, but also of Jefferson’s enduring ideals – of personal liberty, religious choice, and the illimitable freedom of the human mind. In the years to come the Foundation hopes to build upon our history of excellence in scholarship by expanding active engagement with Jeffersonian principles to audiences across the globe.

As a private, nonprofit organization the Thomas Jefferson Foundation receives no regular federal, state or local governmental support. Revenues from ticket sales, the museum shop and garden center, and the catalog support the Foundation’s annual budget, but private charitable contributions account for approximately 50 percent of our annual income. We rely on our donors to provide vital support that empowers our capacity to preserve and educate.

On these pages we thank the individuals, foundations, corporations, and organizations whose gifts to the Thomas Jefferson Foundation during 2008 supported the operating budget and other critical initiatives. We gratefully receive these contributions as a testament that Jefferson’s ideas and ideals continue to resonate around the world.
