Donors advance Jefferson’s enduring ideals

DONORS to the Thomas Jefferson Foundation are stewards not only of Monticello, the iconic three-dimensional autobiography of Thomas Jefferson and the only house in America on the United Nations’ World Heritage list, but also of Jefferson’s enduring ideals — of personal liberty, religious choice, and the illimitable freedom of the human mind. The Foundation plans to build upon our history of excellence in scholarship by engaging a global audience in a dialogue about Jefferson’s ideals.

As a private, nonprofit organization the Thomas Jefferson Foundation receives no regular federal, state or local governmental support. We rely on the private support of our donors to empower our capacity to preserve and educate.

On these pages we thank the individuals, foundations, corporations, and organizations whose gifts to the Thomas Jefferson Foundation during 2009 supported the operating budget and other critical initiatives.

We gratefully receive these contributions as a testament to the genius of Jefferson.

The Monticello Fund

The Thomas Jefferson Foundation gratefully acknowledges the donors who made gifts to the Monticello Fund over the period Jan. 1 to Dec. 31, 2009.
