GIFT REPORT 2012

THOMAS JEFFERSON'S Legacy

THOMAS JEFFERSON is best remembered as the author of the Declaration of Independence. The idea that “all men are created equal” with a right to “life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness” established the foundations of self-government and personal liberty in America. Jefferson’s eloquent words of 1776 continue to inspire people of all ages around the world today. Monticello was the center of Jefferson’s world, and the Thomas Jefferson Foundation is dedicated to preserving Monticello and engaging a global audience in a dialogue with Jefferson’s ideas.

Giving to Monticello

As a private, nonprofit organization, the Thomas Jefferson Foundation is not supported by federal or state funds. The Foundation relies on the private support of donors like you to accomplish our mission of preservation and education.

EACH YEAR:

- ▶ Close to 440,000 people visit Jefferson’s mountaintop home—the only home in America recognized by the United Nations as a World Heritage Site.
- ▶ More than two million visit monticello.org.
- ▶ More than 96,000 school-age children explore Monticello each year on family and school trips.
- ▶ The Smith Department of Education’s K-12 guided student field trips serve more than 14,000 students annually. Many local students are served through scholarship-funded special programs.
- ▶ More than 136,000 walkers, runners, and bikers use the Saunders-Monticello Trail.
- ▶ Monticello and its Robert H. Smith International Center for Jefferson Studies engage people around the world in a global dialogue about Thomas Jefferson’s ideas through a network of scholars, teachers, and a world-class library.

With each gift we can learn and share more about Thomas Jefferson, his life at Monticello, and his impact on our world.

Thank You

Thank you to the individuals, foundations, corporations, and organizations whose gifts to the Thomas Jefferson Foundation supported our mission of preservation and education during 2012.

The Papers of Thomas Jefferson: Retirement Series

Thomas Jefferson's retirement is one of the most fascinating periods of his life, yet it has been the least studied. During his retirement, Jefferson founded the University of Virginia, and sold his unrivaled book collection to the Library of Congress, helping turn it into a great cultural institution. But during this time he also took time to ponder and distill his final word on the many topics that interested him.

The Papers of Thomas Jefferson: Retirement Series prepares and publishes the definitive edition of the letters and other papers documenting the period of Jefferson's post-presidential years, 1809-1826, when he was in residence at Monticello. This editorial project, begun in 1999, operates in tandem with its preretirement counterpart at Princeton University. Both series are published by Princeton University Press.

The Thomas Jefferson Foundation has now published nine volumes of the Retirement Series, containing nearly 5,000 accurately transcribed and annotated documents. A new volume comes out every year. This work is transforming Jefferson studies; two-thirds of the documents written by Jefferson are being published for the first time, and the figure for letters he received is even higher.

A digital version of this edition is now being published by the University of Virginia Press, and the National Archives will soon begin making the rich content of these volumes available worldwide at no cost. Readers can also turn to Monticello's own website for the Retirement Series Digital Archive, which provides searchable access to a large and growing collection of the fascinating correspondence of Thomas Jefferson's extended family as well as to hundreds of accurately transcribed quotes by and about him.

Initially funded by a generous grant from The Pew Charitable Trusts and important gifts from private donors and foundations, the Thomas Jefferson Foundation continues to seek additional funding for the completion of this work. For more information on this consequential project or to support The Papers of Thomas Jefferson: Retirement Series, contact Joshua Scott at (434) 984-9829 or jscott@monticello.org.
