Scope and Content: The Howard C. Rice Collection consists of books owned, and research materials created and compiled by Howard C. Rice, Jr. The collection was donated to the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation in 1978.

The book collection, numbering some 450 monographs and pamphlets, relate to Jefferson, Monticello, eighteenth-century France, and to Jefferson’s contemporaries, such as the Marquis de Lafayette, Benjamin Franklin, and John Adams.

Twenty-seven research binders created as part of work for his book, Thomas Jefferson’s Paris, include copies of artwork and engravings used in the book, original photography from Rice’s own travels, notes, and correspondence, both handwritten and typed, and various clippings. Another eighteen notebooks for Rice’s edition of the Marquis de Chastellux’s Travels in North America in the Years 1780, 1781, and 1782 include maps, notes, and original photographs from Rice’s retracing of Chastellux’s steps. Additional working files in binders relating to his two publications, as well as articles published by him are in four file drawers and three archival boxes, and these include various maps, notes, correspondence, drafts, slides, microfilm, and index cards.

Size: 55 binders, 4 file drawers, 2 archival boxes, and 450 books.

Physical Location: The collection is housed in the Mary Clark Rockefeller Special Collections Room at the Jefferson Library.

Restrictions: The Howard C. Rice Collection is a restricted access archival collection available on request by researchers for on-site use. Photocopying is permitted for reference use only upon receipt of staff approval; some items may not be copied because of physical condition.
Publication and Copyright Information: Special permission may be granted for duplicating material found within the research notebooks, or for reproducing certain images in the collection. Approved use requires printing the following acknowledgement with each citation or image: “From the Howard C. Rice Collection, Jefferson Library, courtesy Thomas Jefferson Foundation, Inc.”

Biographical Sketch: Howard Crosby Rice, Jr. was born on October 24, 1904 in Brattleboro, Vermont. He obtained his A.B. from Dartmouth College in 1926, and received the degree of Docteur de l’Université de Paris in 1933 with his thesis, “Le Cultivateur américain: Etude sur l’oeuvre de Saint John de Crévecoeur”. Rice held several teaching positions in both American and French schools before his term at Harvard University from 1936 to 1942 as Faculty Instructor in French and Tutor in History and Literature. After World War II, Rice served as Director of the United States Information Library in Paris in the U.S. Embassy.

From 1948 until his retirement in 1970, Rice was an Associate Professor at Princeton University, and served as the Assistant Librarian for Rare Books and Special Collections. He also served as editorial consultant to The Papers of Thomas Jefferson editorial project at Princeton University. His publications include numerous articles and book reviews on historical, literary, artistic, and bibliographical subjects. Author of more than a half dozen scholarly studies, his later historical editing work dealing with various aspects of Franco-American relations, include Travels in North America in the years 1780, 1781 and 1782, and The American campaigns of Rochambeau’s army, 1780-1783. His book, Thomas Jefferson’s Paris, published by Princeton University Press in 1976, was honored as the first recipient of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial Foundation Award for Creative Scholarship in 1978. Howard C. Rice died in November 1980 at the age of 76.

Collection History: In describing his collection of books and papers, Rice wrote: “It is a mixed bag of ‘working papers’ and the accumulation of reference materials gathered along the way as I have pursued historical studies relating to Thomas Jefferson, his contemporaries, and their 18th-century world. The central thread, if there is one, is Jefferson’s five years in France and his personal and intellectual relations with the French.”

Rice’s research for his 1933 thesis on Saint John de Crévecoeur first brought him into contact with some of Thomas Jefferson’s letters. Further contact with Jefferson letters came in 1934 when Rice worked on a collection of manuscripts by the Marquis de Lafayette for an exhibition to commemorate the centenary of Lafayette’s death. In 1946, Rice was invited to work with Julian Boyd on The Papers of Thomas Jefferson editorial project at Princeton University, and to help locate as many Jefferson letters as possible.

His research illuminated the social scene of which Jefferson was a part during his years in Paris, and led to questions about the physical and geographical places in which those social interactions occurred. Boyd suggested that they attempt to locate and identify the principal buildings and residences in which Jefferson had an interest or where he was accustomed to do business or entertain. Rice’s research led to the accumulation of books, pamphlets, maps of Paris, photographs of prints and paintings, which he eventually distilled into his book, Thomas Jefferson’s Paris, published in 1976. This research material also found its way into the catalogue of the 1976 National Gallery exhibition, The Eye of Thomas Jefferson.

Jefferson’s friend and contemporary, the Marquis de Chastellux, has also been of special interest to Rice. The working papers accumulated during the process of editing the 1963 edition of Chastellux’s Travels in North America in the Years 1780, 1781, and 1782 might be thought of as “the counterpart of the topographical notebooks illustrating Jefferson’s travels in Europe”2. The research binders pertaining to this part of the Howard C. Rice Collection include the documentation for Rice’s bibliography for Travels, and illustrate Chastellux’s journeys from New England south to Virginia, including eighteenth-century views and modern photographs taken in the course of Rice’s own journeys.

Rice’s investigations into eighteenth-century life on both sides of the Atlantic can also be found in his books, and numerous articles and book reviews on historical, literary, artistic, and bibliographical subjects, some of which are listed in the selected bibliography below.
